From the cornfields of Iowa, to the mountains of Germany, to beautiful south-west lower Michigan, Roger has pursued careers in retail, sales and marketing before becoming a campground owner with his wife, Uta, in 1991.

Roger has served on planning and zoning boards for more than 20 years and has taken the lead in drafting campground-friendly ordinances on a local level. He has served on Michigan ARVC's Board of Directors and has been an instructor at the National School of RV Park and Campground Management since 1998 and a regent since 1999.

I would like to thank each of you for signing up for the school and encourage you to bring your own campground's profit & loss statements, campground layouts, business plans, marketing plans or any other information that will allow you to compare or analyze with other student and instructors. This can provide that "extra value" not available anywhere else.
